Judge McIlvaine Discusses Liquor License Question

NO RIGHT TO LEGISLATE

Duty of Court is to Hear and Pronounce—Local Opinion Given President Judge J. A. McIlvaine in handing down his decision on the license question on Saturday afternoon reiterated his oft-repeated declaration that he could not attempt to legislate on the liquor question, having well outlined powers under the laws. Under the court's decision Washington county this year will have 44 licensed places within its borders. Of this number 32 are retail bars in hotels; five are distilleries and seven are breweries. Nine of the retail applicants this year were refused and two applications were withdrawn. Last year there were 61 applicants for the privilege of selling liquor. Of that number 24 retail applicants were granted and seven breweries and five distilleries were given license. Four applications were withdrawn.

Opinion of Court.

In part Judge McIlvaine's opinion is as follows:

"The judge of a license court, taking up each application for a retail license singly in a particular borough, township or ward, has a number of questions to consider and determine. 'First, he must determine whether or not the application is in the form required by the Act of Assembly and whether or not the bond tendered is in due form and the security offered ample.'"

"Second, whether or not the applicant has the required qualifications; or, in other words, is a fit person to have a license."

"Third, whether or not the place sought to be licensed is necessary for the accommodation of the public and the entertainment of strangers and travelers; that is, taking the habits of the people in reference to the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage in a particular borough, township or ward, is there any necessity for having a place where such liquors can be bought, thus accommodating those who are accustomed to use such liquors? The question is one of accommodation, or one that honors the habits of the people. The moral or economical features of the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors is in no way involved. In the eyes of the Brooks law, the habit in adults and in men who are not intemperate is all right and should be accommodated."

"However, after the judge has passed upon the individual applications he must consider the applications of each borough, township or ward as a whole, and if there are more applications than are reasonably necessary to accommodate the public of that particular borough, township or ward, fix the number necessary, selecting the best and rejecting the worst. Or, to use the language of this court in a former opinion filed: 'Where the evidence produced in court shows that licensed retail places are necessary to accommodate the public and for the entertainment of strangers and travelers, the number to be granted within any township, borough or ward is to be determined and should be limited by the court to the minimum number necessary to accommodate the public. We say minimum number for the reason that the purpose of the Act as expressed in its title is to restrain the sale of liquor and not to encourage the same by multiplication of places where it may be had. Too many licensed places in any given municipality sharpens competition and tends to the slack observance of the restrictive features of the license laws. "Following these lines of inquiry, we have disposed of the list of applications for retail licenses from nine boroughs and two townships, as set out in the schedule herewith submitted 29 boroughs and 30 townships in our county now being dry."

Three Possible Courses. Judge McIlvaine said there were three possible courses that might be adopted by the state for the sale of intoxicating liquors: Free rum, regulation or prohibition. Judge McIlvaine stated that as the Brooks license law was variously interpreted according to the different classes of belief, some believe the right is given the court to knock out every application on the "broad ground of public policy," that is "because licensed places are a menace to society," if the judge so desires, and others believe the court in its discretionary powers can do as it pleases and grant every one a license who applies in due form and gives the required bonds, on the "broad ground of public policy"—that is that every one should have an equal chance to make a living.

Court's Duties Outlined. "Both these claims are clearly untenable," says Judge McIlvaine. "The court does have a discretionary power, but it is a discretion limited by the statutes regulating the granting of licenses and the exercises of which is to be guided in each particular case by the evidence submitted or facts within its own knowledge, relating to any particular case. No court has the power or the right arbitrarily to say that the license laws of our state are socially, morally and economically wrong and therefore all applications for licenses are refused, or on the contrary, that all who apply will be granted a license."

Discusses Charleroi Cases. Concerning those against charges had been filed Judge McIlvaine said: "Charges have been filed against Davidson & Klein of Marianna, and against William H. Coles and William H. Zellers, of Charleroi, hotel-keepers, all of whom had licenses last year, to show that they were no longer fit persons to be entrusted with a license, for the reason that they had wilfully violated some one of the penal provisions of the Brooks law. "The testimony in regard to these charges was contradictory, but we are not satisfied, after carefully ex-

MINES ARE OPERATING

APOLLO MINE RESUMES

Five of Pittsburg Coal Company Properties Near Fayette City Working

Practically all the mines of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke company in the fourth pool are operating now. Within the last week the Apollo mine, which is however, directly under the supervision of the Pittsburg Coal company, resumed on full time, and others have started. The engineer's strike on Monongahela valley steamboats has in some instances been settled by the various companies. The strike was the cause of some of the mines being closed down.

When the Apollo mine started employment was given to something over 300 men on full time. There are five of the mines of the Pittsburg Coal company in the Belle Vernon-Fayette City vicinity that are operating steadily now, most of them shipping by water. Included in this list are the Fayette City mine, Apollo, Redstone, Arnold No. 2 and Tremont. One independent mine, the Warner, is running steadily, but Naomi another independent mine only irregularly. However it is practically the only mine in the vicinity of Belle Vernon or Fayette City that is not working.

REV. HARVEY DIES SUDDENLY IN PITTSBURG

Rev. Dr. James White Harvey, for the past three years financial secretary of the University of Pittsburgh, fell dead of heart trouble at his residence, 364 Oakland avenue, Pittsburgh Saturday night just after having returned from the tabernacle, where he had heard Rev. "Billy" Sunday preach. The sad event caused a great shock when communicated to Chancellor S. B. McCormick and Secretary S. B. Linhart and other members of the university corps.

Rev. Dr. Harvey was born in Delmont, in Westmoreland county, about 53 years ago. He was graduated in medicine at the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. He practiced for some time and conducted a drug store in Greensburg. He built a new church in California and was its pastor after having graduated from the Western Theological Seminary at Pittsburgh. Afterward he was pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church in Washington, from whose Washington and Jefferson College he had been a graduate in his early life.

He leaves a widow and three children one of whom is Rev. Dr. Plummer R. Harvey, pastor of the Morningstar Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh. One daughter is a student in Dillworth Hall, Pennsylvania College for Women and another a student in the university of Pittsburgh.

NURSE AT NORMAL DIES FROM FEVER

Miss Cleaver Falls Victim to Combination of Diseases

FUNERAL OCCURS TODAY

A victim of scarlet fever and diphtheria, Miss Nelle Cleaver, nurse at the Southwestern State Normal school at California died at the school Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Some three weeks ago Henry Walker, of Somerset, a student at the Normal school was taken ill of scarlet fever. He was isolated and Miss Cleaver placed in charge of the case. A week later she also developed the disease. She was doing well until within the past few days when diphtheria developed, resulting fatally Saturday evening. Walker is slowly recovering from his illness.

The daughter of M. H. Cleaver of Centerville, Miss Cleaver had spent practically all her life in Washington county. She was 41 years of age. For the past three years she had been employed as nurse at the Normal school.

Miss Cleaver's mother has been dead for 25 years. Besides the father there survive two sisters, Mrs. Fred Linton, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. James Hill of California.

Short funeral services were held at the Normal school Sunday evening. The funeral cortege left at 9 o'clock Monday morning for the Taylor cemetery at Centerville. There services were conducted at the grave by the Rev. John W. Kink of the Bellevue circuit.

GOOD SHOW ON FOR TONIGHT AT LYRIC

A good show is billed for tonight at the Lyric theatre. The headliner attraction will be "The Street Singers," a special Vitagraph feature in two parts, in which Lillian Walker will be featured. In addition to this exquisite production there will be "Proposal From Mary," the sixth and last story of "Who Will Marry Mary?" and "Just Sissy's Little Way," featuring Arthur Johnston, together with two good comedies.

Notice.

My wife having left my bed and board without just cause I wish to notify the public that I will not be responsible for any bills contracted for in my name. Martin Ferrase, 211 Meadow Avenue, Charleroi, Pa. 176-16p

Craig's Gather At Home of Mother To Remember Her Birthday

Five of Pittsburg Coal Company Properties Near Fayette City Working

In honor to their mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Craig of 312 Washington avenue, a family reunion was held on Sunday at her home. The five sons in the family with their wives and children spent the greater part of the day there. The sons are: William Craig, David Craig and Robert Craig, of Charleroi; James Craig, of Pittsburgh and Thomas Craig, of Monongahela. There are eleven grand children of Mrs. Craig and they were present too. Mrs. Craig and her family are among the oldest residents of the town, having located here when Charleroi first started. She is 74 years old. Mrs. Craig was one of the first charter members of the First Presbyterian church of this place.

Movement for Taking Over Charleroi-Monessen Structure Gains

PETITION WELL SIGNED

Three Thousand Names on Paper—Workingmen's Viewpoint Considered

Considering one of their first duties in the matter of free bridges is the establishment of free connections between Charleroi and Monessen over the Charleroi-Monessen bridge, certain citizens of Monessen are beginning work toward having the Charleroi-Monessen bridge freed. The movement is one that is similar to that which has been under way in Charleroi and North Charleroi for a long time. This is the first real interest that Monessen has taken in the movement.

A petition has been signed by 3,000 people it is stated, and boosters of the project are working to get more names. It is argued that the bridge is used daily by thousands, who if they ride the street cars from Monessen to this end of the bridge, or from Charleroi to the opposite end of the bridge, face a ten cent fare. Or it is argued if they walk they have to pay toll, making the burden heavy to the large number of working men who use the bridge.

Among those active in the interests of the free bridge is J. A. Lohman of Monessen. At North Charleroi people have been actively engaged at work for a free bridge. Lately Charleroi citizens revived a movement here and a few days ago got the Charleroi Business Men's association to again take up the project. At Monessen sentiment is somewhat divided, some of the people there being of the opinion that a free bridge between Donora and Monessen would be a better thing for Monessen, and consequently are of the opinion that it should come first.

the blaze. The fire was discovered by David Sethman, who distinguished himself by rescuing Miss Foster.

The cold sweeping wind fanned the flames and caused them to burn all the more rapidly. The fire department responded promptly but the blaze had gained great headway which combined with securing sufficient water pressure caused the fire fighters to devote their attention to saving adjoining properties.

Those residing in the house were the families of William Sethman, Carl Foster, Les Amos, Robert Louitt and Green Norells.

BIG LOSS BY FIRE

Monongahela Apartment Destroyed—Damage Close to $10,000

YOUNG MAN SAVES GIRL

Fire destroyed a two-story building on Bridge street, Monongahela, Sunday night at 11 o'clock. An act of heroism attended the fire in getting a girl from the burning building. County Controller T. J. Underwood was the owner, whose loss combined with that of the five occupants of the structure will approach close to $10,000.

The occupants of the apartment house were forced to flee into the Arctic winds in their night clothing and seek shelter in the homes of neighbors. Women had to be carried from the flaming building.

Miss Luslia Foster, whose parents occupied an apartment, was overcome by the smoke and she was not missed for several minutes. By this time the fire had spread so rapidly that it seemed certain the young woman would be burned to death. Men seemed afraid to venture into what seemed to be a seething furnace.

Then David Sethman rushed into the structure and found his way to the Foster apartment. Fortunately he had no trouble in locating the unconscious Miss Foster and grabbing her in his arms made his way through the smoke and furnace like heat to the street below. The thrilling and heroic rescue was witnessed by a large crowd who had by this time been attracted by the flames.

The fire started on the second floor in the kitchen of a suite of rooms occupied by the family of William Sethman. It is not known what caused

INDUSTRIAL PROSPECTS

The demand of the miners' convention before its adjournment at the Indianapolis convention that if there be no suspension pending negotiations of the scale demands should give a better industrial feeling throughout this whole section. If the operators fall in with the demand and continue to operate their mines in case a speedy agreement is not reached, the usual month or six weeks idleness in the spring will be averted. This possibility has had a depressing effect in this section, many business men hesitating to push trade conditions, or prepare for an expansion, because of the possibility of a suspension in mining operations when the present scale expires. The demands of the miners are moderate, and there is every indication that they are prepared to meet the operators on any fair basis of a compromise.

In addition to the prospects for a speedy settlement of the mining scale, there are indications of revivals in other big industries. The railroads are placing orders for supplies and equipment, which is stimulating the iron and steel industry and the production of coke.

REPUBLICAN PHILOSOPHY.

Judge Henney, of Hartford, the Connecticut member of the Republican National Committee, in a speech at the McKinley Day banquet in Bridgeport propounded what many accepted as up-to-date Republican philosophy, when he said:

"Let us welcome to our ranks every sincere and genuine reformer; let us turn a cold shoulder to the faddists and the cranks. It is no time for paltering. We cannot reunite the party by peddling out palliatives or dopes and the olive branch is an offense to the conscientious brother who asks for a political creed in keeping with the times. We must have a modern platform, sanely progressive and our political methods must be elevated above reproach.
Then let those join our standards who will, and let those who will not go on their way. We must have no cod-dling. Let it be understood that no essential Republican principle will be sacrificed on the altar of harmony, but that just complaints will be freely heard and promptly redressed.
Let us forget old feuds and factions."

Glowworms Use Anesthetics.

Before he begins to feast the glow-worm administers an anesthetic. He chloroforms his victim, rivalling in the process the wonders of modern surgery, which render the patient insensible before the surgeon operates on him. The usual glow worm is a small, slim, nearly the size of a cherry, which in its larval stage is found in clusters on the underside of leaves and other dry sticks by the roadside, remaining there intensely, in prolonged meditation, until the victim is brought to the place where it is to be fed. It is then that the glow worm administers its anesthetic, and the victim is brought to the place where it is to be fed. It is then that the Holding Thumbs For Nilsson.

My professional vocation has brought me up against almost every conceivable superstition, from Krampus's stuffed deer's head to the more common place fetish against thirteen as a number. But I never saw any one more obsessed by an idea of this sort than Christine Nilsson. She actually would not sing unless some one "held her thumbs" first. "Holding thumbs" is quite an ancient way of inciting good luck. One promises to "hold one's thumbs" for a friend who is going through some ordeal, like a first night, or an operation for appendicitis or a wedding or anything else desperate.
Nilsson was the first person I ever knew who practiced the charm the other way about. Before she would even go on the stage somebody, if only the stage carpenter, had to take hold of her two thumbs and press them. She was convinced that the mystic rite brought her good fortune.—Memories

Illumination by Phosphorus.

Phosphorus is sometimes used for illuminating purposes, but the light is rather dim. The method is as follows, and it is serviceable when means of striking a light are not at hand: Take a long and narrow vial of the whitest and clearest glass, put in a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea, upon which pour some olive oil heated to the boiling point; fill the vial about one-third full and then seal the vial hermetically. To use it remove the cork and allow the air to enter the vial, and then recork it. The empty space in the bottle will then become luminous, and the light obtained will be equal to that of a dull lamp. As soon as the light becomes weak its power can be increased by opening the vial and allowing a fresh supply of air to enter. In winter it is sometimes necessary to heat the vial between the hands to increase the fluidity of the oil. Thus prepared the vial may be used for six months.

Four Sons of Fame.

It is a rarity for more than one member of any family to become famous.
Nature seems to concentrate in more than one son of the same house enough of similar grit genius and ability wherewith to cut a niche in the temple of fame. The exceptions to this rule are very few. The Pitts, the Adamses, the Van Burens and the Kochers have already been honored with this distinction, and to this roll of honor must be added the Fields.
There is hardly a parallel case in history where four brothers attained such prominence as David Dudley Field, Henry M. Field, Cyrus W. Field and Stephen J. Field. These men were truly called four sons of fame, age, and four brothers in fate.—Magazine

Paul's Personal Appearance.

All that we know of Paul's personal appearance from his own writings is found in 11 Cor. x. 10, which indicates that he did not possess the attributes of a distinguished or imposing presence. His stature was somewhat distinctive, his eyesight weak (see Acts xviii. 12 and 13). He did not did regard his address as impressive. Much of this personal criticism, however, may have been the outcome of the apostle's desire to a self-asserting character or his own modesty. A fourth century tablet represents him as venerable looking and dignified, with a high, bald forehead, full bearded and with features indicating force of character. One ancient writer says Paul's nose was strongly aquiline. All the early pictures and mosaics, as well as some of the early writers (among them Malalas and Nicephorus) agree in describing the apostle as of short stature, with long face, prominent eyebrows, clear complexion and a winning expression, the whole aspect being that of power and dignity. The oldest known portrait is the Roman panel of the fourth century, already referred to above.—Christian Herald.

Easy Solution.

"Say," said the "wise guy" to the patient listener, "did you hear about that fellow who came in on a South body could make him understand any one of seventeen different languages?

They even tried him with the deaf head and said nothing. Finally they had to send him back to the boat, and he'll probably spend the rest of his life sailing back and forth between here and South America, as nobody knows what country he comes from. I bet I could find where he hails from. Simplest thing in the world. Just get a collection of coins from all countries

Gravity of a Spinning Top.

A spinning top is kept from falling because of the speed with which it revolves. The attraction of gravitation is temporarily overcome by the centrifugal force produced by the rotation of the top when it is spun. Each part of the top is subject to the same centrifugal force as each other part at the same distance from the axis of rotation and to no greater force, so that there is no cause for the top being pulled in any particular direction by the force of gravity. As soon as the centrifugal force begins to lessen because of lessening speed of rotation the attraction of gravity begins to be exerted again and the top begins to wobble.
When the spinning motion diminishes to such an extent that the attraction of gravitation becomes greater than the centrifugal force the top falls to one side.

Old Estimate of Field Hands.

The sixteenth century Earl of Warwick stayed the slaughter after the suppression of Kett's rising by an argument which shows how completely agricultural workers were regarded as mere "hands." Of the 20,000 insurgents who had camped with Kett on Moosehold Heath 2,000 or 3,000 had been killed in the battle, the strength of the victors lying in German and Italian mercenaries. Kett himself was hanged from the walls of Norwich castle, forty-five others were hanged, drawn and quartered in the market place, and 300 in all are said to have been executed. Warwick checked the demand for increasing the number of victims by asking, "What shall we do, then—hold the plow ourselves, play the carters and labor the ground with our own hands?"—London Chronicle.

David Livingstone.

David Livingstone will always rank among the most illustrious of the African explorers. He was a real pathfinder and civilizer as well as a most devoted Christian and philanthropist.
Upon his large and lasting fame there seems to be not a single blot. From the spot in Africa where he died, near Chitambos village, on the Malilano, Livingstone's body was in 1874 taken to England and deposited with high honors in Westminster abbey, the government bearing all the expenses of the elaborate funeral.

Two Views.

"What I want to see," said the reformer, "is a city that knows absolute nothing of craft."
"That's just what I'd like to see," replied the ward politician. "Wouldn't it be a gold mine for the right parties?"—Washington Star.

Quite a Word.

What word is there in the English language the first two letters of which signify a male, the first three a female, the first four a great man, and the whole a great woman? Heroine.

The Uplift.

lift, don't you think?"

What Hisses Sound Like to an Actor

In the American Magazine David Warfield, giving his stage experiences, tells how terrible it is from the actor's point of view to be hissed.
"I next appeared at the Wigwam, telling stories and giving imitations.
I came a terrible cropper, something fearful! I was second in the bill, which is the worst place but one. I should never forget the anxiety I felt on that occasion, as I stood in the wings waiting for my turn to go on.
At last I appeared before the foot lights. The audience was drifting in shuddering in a desultory way. I could not get its attention. It was awful, awful. The few friends I had there applauded me, but the others hissed.
It sounded as if 10,000 steam pipes had burst. A hiss to a sensitive man—and all actors are sensitive since all are vain—is like the strike of a rattlesnake. It is so venomous, so cruel, so unnecessary! It is as if you had done the people out in front an injury with malice prepense instead of having sincerely tried to please them. You don't even dare to face your own mother; you're so dreadfully guilty."

Got on Dangerous Ground.

Telling of his experience in Jolo, in the Philippines, a writer in the New York Times says: "When I was first picking up some of their language there ran toward me one day a band somewhat dressed like boys, his mother following at a distance. I picked the boy up and asked his mother how much he was worth. I thought it an utterly harmless way of attempting a cliffy. But the scream the mother let out, followed by a quick rushing of men with knives from all the imroundabout, soon convinced me I had offended seriously. A priest of their faith, who had been giving me language lessons, was luckily among the first to arrive. I explained to him I had meant nothing wrong. He in turn explained to me that bartering in children was very much of a reality among them and, more than that, that it was not the custom for any man ever to address a remark to their women at all. I had doubly offended, as the child was a datto's son, and only the children of the low and enslaved were for sale."

Wedded Eyebrows.

In Turkey meeting eyebrows are greatly admired, and the women use artificial means to bring the brows to this condition, and if art cannot induce thin eyebrows to grow they make up by drawing a black line with paste.
It would appear that the Greeks admired brows which almost met, and the fashionable inhabitants of Rome not only approved of them, but resorted to pigments to make up the lack which sometimes existed.
Some proverbists state that the person whose eyebrows meet will always have good luck, while others state exactly the reverse. The Chinese say that "people whose eyebrows meet can never hope to attain to the dignity of a minister of state," and in Greece of today the man whose brows meet is said to be a vampire, while in Denmark and Germany it is said he is a werewolf.—London Spectator.

Don't Scratch a Mole.

Dr. Jean Dardier, speaking before the French Association for the Study of Cancer, referred to the tragic possibilities of the innocent looking mole.
"Scratch a mole," he said, "and you may catch a cancer."
Some moles were harmless and some were potentially poisonous, he continued. The only wise course was to leave well enough alone and resist the temptation to scratch the mole. Warts and wens should be borne patiently lest worse befall their possessors. Dr.
Dardier told of a man who by cauteriz-ing a harmless wart on his hand transformed it into a cancer.

Met His Match.

A cyclone visited the negro quarters in an Alabama mining camp several years ago. It tumbled down the cabin and not one joist or sill was left standing. Uncle Joe was the only one who came through the visitation unscathed.
"Yas, sub," he said, "I hea'd dat
'vin' cemin' through de bresh, an' I seen it, an' I felt it, an' I knew it was de s'rkone—an' I's de onliest pusson in dat settlement w'nt could say, 'Heah she comes,' an' 'Dar she goes!'"
—New York Post.

National Conversations.

If you see three men standing together on the sidewalk in any given country, you can guess the subject of their conversation. In Germany it is the army; in Russia, the bureaucracy; in France, women; in the United States, business; in England, sport, and in Turkey nothing at all.—Brussels Journal.

His Manifest Aspect.

Small Boy—Mamma, is it really true that the devil has horns and a club foot? The Mother—Ah, my dear, sometimes the devil appears in the shape of a very handsome and charming young man. Small Boy (pitifully).
—Oh, mamma, you're thinking of Cupid!—London Punch.

Only One Mood.

Inquisitive Friend—Don't you find that your wife is very subject to moods? Enneke—No; she has only one mood, the imperative, and I'm the one that's subject to that!—Judge.

Heart and Hand.

The surname Heart is really a corruption of Hand, which was a name given to show that the owner was a man of firm character and resolute purpose.

Life is measured by experience and not by years.—Latin Proverb.

England's Oddest Island.

There is an English parish, only forty-eight miles from London, where roads, shops, lamps, telephones, mo-torcars and post-offices are unknown.
It is Elmley, and it is an island, says the Boston Transcript. The island has an area of 2,000 acres and is the property of Oxford University.

Some time ago the island was the home of thirty-five men, women and children. The inhabitants are mostly "lookers" or shepherds of large flocks of sheep. The oldest man of the village is in his seventieth year. He has never seen a motorcar.

Rented Wedding Cake.

There was something wrong with the cake, the baker said. It looked all right, and it smelled all right, but his artistic sense told him it would not taste all right.
"Then fix it up with an extra coat of icing and we will keep it for a renter," said the proprietor.
"Who in the world would rent a cake?" some one asked.
"Wedding parties," said he. "They want a big cake in the center of the table for show, but a cake of that size good enough for a wedding would cost more than they can afford to pay, so they order fine cake put up in individual boxes for the guests and use the bride's cake just as an ornament. They don't buy it; they just rent it. Sometimes a cake is rented a dozen different times. After each wedding it is freshened up with a new coat of icing and looks as good as new for the next occasion. A good renter fetches about $3 a wedding."—Washington Star.

Mixed Bathing.

Mixed bathing was a question that caused trouble under the Roman empire. It came in with the collapse of austere republican manners, and the Emperors Hadrian and Marcus Aure-lius found it necessary to issue orders against it. Alexander Severus also forbade the opening of "balea mixta" in Rome. Later on we find great diversity of view in Europe on the matter. In the fifteenth century Bohemian and Spanish travelers were astonished at the goings on at Bruges, Malines and Brussels. The Spaardier observes that "the bathing together of men and women, skin bare, is here reckoned as innocent as is, with us, a visit to church." The public baths at the Swiss Baden, where only a railing separated the sexes, scandalized Poggio Bracciolini.

Tried to Stay Good.

She was angry, and her face revealed the fact.
"What is the matter, dear?" said her husband as he entered the kitchen.
"You see that?" she replied vehemently as she raised a mixing bowl in which she had just broken an egg.
"That is the second bad egg I have found today. I believe Jim Fletcher keeps all the bad ones he gets in his old store for me!"
"Well, you shouldn't get angry about it, Nellie," said her husband soberly.
"You ought to have more sympathy."
"Sympathy?" she echoed. "What do you mean? Sympathy for Jim Fletcher?"
"No, for the eggs," he replied.
"Think how long they must have been trying to be good!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Fantastic Freezing.

One morning last winter I put out a saucerful of water in the garden to freeze, and about ten minutes afterward it had a skin of ice on the top.
I then left it and returned in an hour and a half's time, when there was a tall pillar of ice sticking straight up from the surface, up the center of which was a string of air bubbles, forming a tube. It was not placed under anything from which water might drip on to it. I have tried to find out the cause and have not succeeded.—London Strand Magazine.

Retort Courteous.

you to call on a previous occasion?
Tramp—Begging your ladyship's gra-dious pardon, but my secretary must have forgotten to tick your name off my visiting list.—Exchange.

"But I didn't hold your hand."
"Then who did?"—Louisville Courier-

POSITION IS PLAIN

examining this evidence and giving due consideration, that either one of these applicants willfully violated any of the provisions of the law under which they are licensed.

There was no evidence whatever that they personally had sold any liquor to minors or to men of intemperate habits or to men visibly under the influence of liquor. Neither was there any evidence to show that they had not exercised reasonable care in the selection of their bartenders, or that they had failed to give them proper instructions, or that they had not taken all reasonable precautions to prevent minors and men of intemperate habits from frequenting their saloon. This being the case, we feel that we would not be justified in finding and holding that either one of these applicants, by reason of the manner in which he previously conducted his hotel, had become an unfit person to be entrusted with a license.

"We would say, however, in regard to the manner in which large crowds are served in these bars on paydays and on occasions when large numbers of people frequent the saloon, that there ought to be some way devised by which the patrons are served in their order so as to avoid having them stand three and four deep in front of the bar, giving an opportunity for minors and men of intemperate habits to be served, when not in full view of the bartender. How this shall be done is a matter for these applicants to determine."

Suggests Holiday Closing.

Concerning the matter of closing on holidays, the court gave the following opinion, and suggestions:

"During the last day of the license court we received a communication from the Ministerial Association in the eastern part of the county, requesting the court to make some order or suggestion that would result in licensed places being closed on Thanksgiving Day, Christmas and Memorial Day. As we have said on previous occasions, this court cannot legislate and add days on which license places shall be closed in addition to those named in the Act of Assembly.

"To do so would be to amend the Brooks law, and we have no legislative power. We can, however, as we do in this case, approve the suggestion of these petitioners, and we would suggest that the Washington County Hotel association, composed of persons who hold licenses from this court, at their next meeting, or at a called meeting, take up this question of granting the request that has been made to the court.

License holders of course should be allowed to manage their own business and to do anything and everything to advance their financial interest that is within the law, yet it certainly would be good policy on the part of the holders of license to recognize the fact that there is a strong sentiment against the sale of liquor and that concessions made by people in the business would be appreciated.

"We have no hesitation in saying that the class of hotel men that we have in this county and which holds license and also the character of the places they keep, is far above that in many other counties, and that the temperance people as well as this court, recognize that fact, and if they comply with the request that has been here suggested, still add to the good opinion in which they are held, we hope that they will see fit to do so."

THAT TIRED FEELING

Suggests Grandmother's Remedy

It's true, the season is here with its sudden changes, and the old idea that we need a blood medicine is not without reason. Too much heavy food has caused a torpid liver, sluggish blood and a weak, tired out feeling.

Sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses was grandmother's remedy but that has long ago been displaced by Vinol, a combination of the two most world famed tonics, namely, the medicinal curative elements of the cod's liver without oil, and iron for the blood.

Vinol builds you up, makes you eat more and digest better, makes your blood rich and pure---puts healthy color in your cheeks.

N. G. Clift of Opalika, Ala., says: "Last spring I was all run-down, no strength, no appetite. I took Vinol and was greatly benefited by its use as I soon felt strong and well as ever."

We guarantee Vinol to satisfy you and refund your money if it does not. Piper Bros., Druggists, Charleston, Pa. P. S. For children's Eczema, Saxe Salve is guaranteed truly wonderful.

A False Standard of Culture has gained ground in this century which looks upon the bearing and rearing of children as something coarse and vulgar and to be avoided, but the advent of Eugenics means much for the motherhood of the race. Happy is the wife who, though weak and ailing, depends upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore her to health and when headaches and backaches are a thing of the past, brave sons and fair daughters rise up and call her blessed.

SETTING THE TABLE.

It Was Aldin to a Religious Ceremony in Queen Elizabeth's Court.

The setting out of the dinner of Queen Elizabeth was a ceremony of function.

First came a gentleman with a rod, followed by a gentleman carrying a tablecloth, which, after they had knelt reverently three times, was spread upon the table. Then came two others, one with a rod, the other with a saltcellar, a plate and bread. They knelt three times, placed the things on the table, knelt again and retired. Next came a lady in waiting, followed by a second. The first lady, dressed in white, after kneeling three times, approached the table and solemnly rubbed the plates with the salt.

Then entered twenty-four women of the guard clad in scarlet and each carrying a dish of gold. These dishes were placed upon the table, while the lady taster gave to each of the guards a taste from the dish he had brought in for fear of possible poison. These guards were selected from the tallest and stoutest men in all England.

At the close of this ceremony a number of unmarried ladies appeared and with great solemnity lifted the various dishes and carried them to the queen in her private apartments. The queen dined and supped alone, with few attendants, and it was seldom that any one was admitted at this time, and then only at the intercession of some one in power.

EARTH EATERS OF SIAM.

Among the Loas Dirt Is Considered a Great Delicacy.

The Loas of Siam, it is said, eat earth and enjoy it just as the German drinks beer, the Frenchman wine and the Englishman his ale. No one knows exactly where they contracted the habit---perhaps during some time of great famine when there was nothing else to devour. At any rate, the habit is strong, and rich and poor alike indulge.

They prefer it when it is procured near waters so that it has the taste of fish. It is prepared into a pasty substance and smothered in the ground in a hot fire. It is sold in the markets and stores and is served at dinners and big functions of all kinds. Children, women and men eat it together.

Of course it is dreadfully hard on the digestion and in time produces intense pain, and death follows. But, like the opium eater, the dirt eater will beg for his food even at death's door.

In some parts of the Kingdom the dirt is sold in the shape of apples and oranges, and all kinds are given out---yellow dirt, brown dirt, gray earth and pinkish variety, too, which is considered a great luxury instead.---Portland Oregonian.

A Puzzle in Figures.

Take any number of three different figures, as 471, under it place the same figures in reverse order, subtract the lesser number and you will find that the middle figure of the result is invariably 9. Why it is so is something that only the most learned mathematical scholars can explain. Here is one case worked out:

Taking any number say..... 471
Reversing figures..... 174
Subtracting we have..... 297
Further still, we can now reverse this number 297 in the same way and add the two numbers, and the result will always come 1089. Thus:

Taking..... 297
Reversing..... 792
Adding we have..... 1089

Why should the answer always come out the same? Here's something for you to work over.

Two For a Quarter.

He was smoking a fine, full flavored Havana when he met his friend "Have a cigar?" he inquired, very politely.

"Thanks," said the other gratefully, taking and lighting the proffered weed. After a few experimental puffs, however, the friend removed the cigar from his lips and, looking at it doubtfully, said, with a very evident abatement of gratitude in his tone:

"What do you pay for these cigars?"

"Two for a quarter," said the original proprietor of both weeds, taking his own cigar out of his mouth and looking at it with considerable satisfaction. "This one cost me 20 cents and that 5."

The conversation languished at this point.---Puck.

"Links" as Applied to Golf.

Speaking of games, how many know the origin of the word "links" as applied to the field on which golf is played? The dictionary says that "links" means stretch of sandy soil, interrupted by heather. But it comes from an old Saxon word "linc," which means a ledge, an embankment, a boundary. Malvern link and the links of St. Andrews were there and some body invented a game to go with them.---Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Chemical Detective.

Great is the chemist. A glue factory, which was proud of the sticking qualities of its glue, received many complaints that its glue was not sticking, and the manager believed it was not his product that was at fault, but glue made by some other concern and falsely represented to be his.

The chemist was asked to find a remedy. He made a slight change in the process of manufacture, so that when a certain chemical was applied to the glue any time after it had left the factory the glue would immediately change to a certain color. Salesmen were then given bottles of this chemical. Whenever they were told that their glue had failed they asked to see the faulty work and then dropped some of the chemical on the dry glue. If the proper color appeared it was their glue, otherwise it was a competitor's.

If the customer doubted the fairness of the salesman could prove the fairness of it by trying it on any of his firm's glue. This stopped the complaints.---Saturday Evening Post.

Interstellar Space.

That interstellar space is not a sterile void, but is partly filled with particles of matter, however small or invisible, is the theory that an American astronomer has evolved through the study of comets.

His theory is based upon the fact that all bodies fall at the same rate in a vacuum, but in the open air lighter bodies are retarded by friction and fall at a slower rate. If interstellar space were a vacuum all stars, comets and planets would keep the same relative position and speed. But if it were not a vacuum the lighter celestial bodies, such as comets, would tend to be retarded by friction and fall behind the larger and denser bodies.

This retarding would be most noticeable at the part of the comet's orbit which is farthest from the sun, and the comet would tend to change its movement at this point and assume an individual direction. This hypothesis seems to be borne out by his observations.---Popular Mechanics.

Rough Training at Eton.

Early in the last century many boys at Eton, England, had to undergo a rough training. An old Etonian who left the school in 1834 describes his experiences there as "worse than that of many inmates of a workhouse or jail. To get up at 5 on freezing winter mornings; to sweep their own floors and make their own beds; to go two by two to the pump for a scanty wash; to eat no mouthful of food until 9 a. m.; to live on an endless round of mutton, potatoes and beer, none of them too plentiful or too good; to sleep in a dismal cell without chair or table---such was the lot of boys whose parents could not afford to pay for a private room. Some of these underwent privations that might have broken down a cabin boy and would be thought inhuman if inflicted on a galley slave."

Ancient Egyptians.

That the ancient Egyptians were not negroes is certain, and it is equally certain that they did not belong to the Semite or Jewish race. Said the late Professor Huxley: "I am not aware that there are any living people who resemble them, except the Dravidian tribes of central India and the Australians, and I have long been inclined to think that the latter are the lowest and the Egyptians the highest members of a race of mankind of great antiquity, distinct alike from Aryan and Turanian on the one side and from negro and negrito on the other." In a word, nobody can say with any degree of assurance what breed of men the builders of the pyramids were.---New York American.

Explorer's Remarkable Feat.

Sir James Barrie's affection for explorers is no new thing. All who know his "Edinburgh Eleven" will remember the eulogy of Joseph Thomson, the Dumfriesshire Scot, who did pioneer work of the Livingstone kind in Africa. It is a fine pen picture of a dour, brave man, but it has flashes of the early Barrie. This, for example:

"Perhaps his most remarkable feat consisted in taking a bottle of brandy into the heart of Africa and bringing it back intact."---Glasgow News.

Your Silver Teapot.

When the inside of a silver teapot starts to tarnish the following idea is very good to make it look like new: Put a large piece of washing soda into the teapot and fill with boiling water. Then boil it for one hour over a spirit lamp and you will find it will become as bright inside as out, and the soda will not injure the silver in any way.

His Chief Objection.

Turning to the newspaper reporter, who was his passenger, the aviator exclaimed:

"It's all off; the propeller is broken, and we are doomed to fall 6,000 feet!"

"Great guns," cried the reporter. "I hope we don't fall into the water. I can't swim a stroke!"---Lippincott's.

PERILOUS HUGGING.

The Embrace of a Kangaroo Does Not Leave Pleasant Memories.

Notwithstanding the kangaroo's popular reputation for speed, he is easily overtaken in the bush by a good horse. A kangaroo dog---a lean, swift beast---a cross between a greyhound and a mastiff, bred to course and kill---soon runs him to bay. Without dogs it is the custom to kill with a cudgel. This is often accomplished by the sportsman from the back of his horse. If mounted, however, with the kangaroo waiting alertly for attack, it is sometimes a perilous venture to come to close quarters. A slip, and the sportsman finds himself at once in a desperate situation.

One of the lumberjacks with whom we rested in the shade of the blackbutt showed us the scars of an encounter. He had ridden the kangaroo down, said he, and, being in haste to make an end of the sport, he had caught up the first likely stick his eye could discover and he had struck quickly and confidently in, and he had struck hard and accurately. And the next instant, caught off the ground, he was struggling breast to breast in the hug of the creature, frightfully aware that he must escape before the deadly hind foot had devastated him.

"My club broke," he exclaimed, "and the boomer got me."

There were long scars on his back and shoulders, the which we were not very sorry to see, for we could not make out why any man should wish to kill a kangaroo for sport.---Norman Duncan in Harper's.

THE HANGMAN'S ROBE.

Dennis Didn't Like It, So He Said It to "Old Cain."

James Berry was not so well paid for his services as his French confrere, M. Antoine Deliber, who draws $500 a year, while his four assistants have a similar amount to divide between them. Sauson, the first executioner to wield the guillotine, was originally paid $1,500 a year, but when executioners were appointed in each department this was reduced to $500.

Before the revolution the legal tariff in France was 25 shillings for a beheading, 10s. 8d. for a burning at the stake, and the same amount for a hanging, with allowances for the erection of a scaffold or the provision of fuel.

One of James Berry's predecessors, for a brief period, donned a uniform when at work. In 1785, according to a contemporary chronicler, the sheriffs of London were "so pleased with the excellent mode in which Edward Dennis, their hangman, performed his duties that they presented him with a very elegant official robe---a khilnat, in fact, as eastern potentates term a similar garb of honor. Dennis found this inconvenient when at work on the scaffold and sold it to a well known character of those days, 'Old Cain,' who, having set up as a fortune teller, wanted a robe to complete the costume in which he received dupes."---London Chronicle.

A Spoiled Scene.

E. H. Southern once found his wit fail him in time of need. It was in the fourth act of "The Lady of Lyons." Southern played Claude Melnotte, and Virginia Earned was cast as Pauline. Beaumont, the villain, was pursuing Pauline, and she cried loudly for help. Claude is supposed to dash to her rescue and catch the fainting Pauline in his arms. Southern dashed on to the stage, but slipped and slid, sitting down near the footlights. Losing his presence of mind, he declaimed the line: "Look up, Pauline. There is no danger." As Virginia Earned was standing this was, of course, an impossibility. By this time the audience was in an uproar, and when Arthur Lawrence, who played Beaumont, scornfully said, "You are beneath me," the amusement of the audience knew no bounds.

Marksmen and Rifles.

No marksman ever holds a rifle "as solidly as a rock." He may think he does, but Arms and the Man insists that the best shot gives merely the "necessary impulse to the trigger, while the rifle is moving in the right direction"---that is, when he takes deliberate aim. The snap shooter works apparently by a sort of instinct. Firing successfully at a running deer through the woods and over broken ground implies a knack like that of thrusting one's finger toward an indicated object.---New York Times.

Natural Inference.

A schoolteacher was reading a story to a class of very small folks and paused at the words "lay brother" to explain their meaning. "Does any one know what 'lay brother' means?" she asked.

For a moment a row of perplexed little faces looked up at her. Then one face brightened suddenly, and a small voice piped, "Yes, ma'am, it's a rooster."---Youth's Companion.

He Was Sensitive.

Blotbs---You're pretty much stuck on Miss Gobbs, aren't you, old man? Hobbs---I was once, but after what she said to me last night I'm not going to pay any more attention to her. Blotbs---Gee! What did she say? Hobbs---"No!"---Cleveland Leader.

Nothing Lacking.

Manager---Your play seems to lack the human touch. Playwright---You are mistaken, sir. My hero borrows money from his friends in almost every act.---Boston Transcript.

Why It Is Fiction.

Women are mysterious except in fiction. There they are solved in the last chapter.---Wisconsin State Journal.
